IPOH HERITAGE TRAIL

GUIDE

Law Siak Hong, of the Perak Heritage Society

3-Hours (9.00 am to 12.00 noon) Central Porch, Ipoh Railway Station. START END

Kong Heng Square

This guided walk takes you through the heritage core of Ipoh, in Old Town, naturally, and introduces the food we find along the way.

In 1893, after a great fire that wiped out 2/3 of town the year before, the British administration created the Ipoh Sanitary Board to run the town. Consistent with town planning of the time, rectilinear grids were drawn for roads and blocks for buildings. In the domain of the the Panglima Kinta, an aristocratic clan with a history dating back to 17th century, Ipoh became, quite quickly, the good-time town of the Kinta Valley, where pioneering miners and planters took relief from the harsh environment. Ipoh had begun life as a riverine kampong by the Kinta River - a tributary of the magnificent Perak River - that meanders through the Valley that was once the world's richest producing region of tin ore.

The Heritage Walk will pass through and pause at some significant institutions and iconic buildings. It is light  $\boldsymbol{\vartheta}$ easy, with stops for photography. Look around and ask questions about what intrigues you. Learn about the town's history and food you see along the way.

We savour the journey by taking in the myriad vintage
